S-UNION

Published by Gannett

35 Cents Newsstand

SALE? – 6D LEFTY DRIESELL'S CONTROVERSIES – 1D

rowned in bay outlet

Burr Lewis/Times-Union

e County Sheriff's Department divers today during search of quoit Bay outlet for the body of a 20-year-old man.

Breast barers plan Donahue appearance on Thursday

By CHRIS LAVIN
Times-Union

The seven women arrested at Cobbs Hill Park Saturday never expected their breast exposure to get the exposure they're getting.

As word of their protest pulsed out over the airwaves and national newswires yesterday, their phones began ringing off the hook.

Requests for interviews.

Statements of support.

An invitation to appear Thursday morning on the nationally-televised talk show Donahue.

"It's a little overwhelming," said Mary Lou Schloss, 38, a homemaker and mother of two children. "Our lives have sort of been taken over by it."

Schloss and six other women removed their shirts Saturday to launch a legal attack on what they called a "sexist" state law that allows men to go topless in public while threatening

Please turn to back of section are killed

The Associated Press

et ambassador to the United States, leaving White e, Liana, after meeting President Reagan yesterday.

onfidence the sum- probably after the elections.

ets will suggest a 're waiting for us," at out. We'll have a declare the 1979 n treaty dead even though he has announced his intention later this year to deploy more B-52 bombers equipped with cruise missiles than the unratified treaty would permit.

He emphasized, however, that the United States would not continue to abide by the SALT II limits unilaterally if the Soviets continued to violate it.

Breast barers

From page 1A

topless women with arrest.

The seven were arraigned in City Court yesterday, pleaded innocent and were released without bail to await trial.

"Frankly we're shocked," said Ramona Santorelli, organizer of Saturday's protest. "We had planned on a little picnic. Something very discreet, coordinated with the police. But word got out sooner than we expected and the hype drew all the attention."

That attention has included constant calls from radio stations around the country — including New York City, Washington D.C., Phoenix, Chicago and San Francisco.

"We got one call from some station in Arkansas," said Morley Schloss, Mary Lou Schloss' husband and a leader of Naturist Rochester, a nudist group that supported the protest. "I never even heard of the town before. It wasn't Little Rock."

While Schloss said final plans for who will be appearing on Donahue have not yet been made, it is likely that on Thursday Santorelli will be seen by millions on Donahue. Santorelli and two of the other seven will defend their right to bare all before a live studio audience.

Researchers for the Donahue show contacted the protesters, but weren't immediately available for comment today.

"It's a natural for Donahue," Gail Steinberg, a Donahue aide said yesterday.

Donahue can be seen locally at 9 a.m. on WOKR-TV (Channel 13).

"We are really shocked," Santorelli said. "But, then, everything works out for the best."

In addition to Mary Lou Schloss and Santorelli, arrested at the protest were Deborah A. Seymore, 34; Nikki G. Craft of Oshkosh, Wis.; Lynn E. Zicari, 24, Kathleen F. Reilly, 40; and Elise Jo Tooley, 27.

om-boom man behind Liberty gala nce.

urred, suggesting the lippines instead.

cy Aquino," Wolper for other places in 't leave her country country she's run-ing ceremonies who was riding in the limousine with Wolper, was sympathetic. "They haven't written a song called New Jersey, New Jersey yet," he said.

Wolper says he believes he is unfairly taking the blame for a backlash against the commercialism entailed in raising money to renovate the statue and Ellis Island. "They're putting the statue on began: "Her breasts stand 14 yards out of the harbor." And the minister of a religious group in Georgia who wanted to bring his congregation, as he somberly put it, "to come to New York for the ceremony and walk on the water."

Wolper started a recent day at his office in New York with a meeting of the staff of the "sports salute" seg-